The Moors Murders that sparked a race to solve the crime - Neverminder ===== DoctorOetker The real story is that having a socialist government, after stealing the land from the "peasant farmers", they had to redistribute the land for their workers. This in turn created a surplus of land, many needed acreages were bought and farmed out to immigrant workers (not the politically correct term), thus the shortage of labor. This surplus of land in turn led to lower wages for the workers, this in turn led to a social crisis caused by increased crime (I may be wrong here, but I have heard the "reactionary" explanation for crime), and finally the roots of fascism. Also, by repealing laws against farm labour, they ironically also allowed the farmers to buy the stolen land, without them there would be no surplus to buy at cheaper prices. Of course this is a much simplified version, but it is much more complex. ----- sp332 This story has been posted almost every year since the Moors murders. [3da54e8ca3
