Investigations into the management of substance abuse in prison patients. The majority of inmates in correctional facilities suffer from substance-abuse related problems, including polysubstance dependence. These patients can benefit from evidence-based clinical and pharmacotherapeutic interventions, but they have several barriers to successful treatment, including ambivalence about treatment, length of incarceration, and imprisonment in general. Other barriers include (a) the correctional system's unique features of administration of care by medication as a substitute for face-to-face care,

(b) lack of mental health expertise, and (c) limited access to primary care due to the lack of physician involvement. This article will review approaches to the assessment and treatment of substance-use disorders among inmates.[Prevalence of IgG antibodies to Chlamydia trachomatis in chronic urogenital infections]. We determined the presence of antibodies to Chlamydia trachomatis in the sera of the infected and uninfected patients using the micro-immunofluorescence (MIF) test. The second part of the study was directed at determining the diagnostic value of this test. The results of the study showed that 78% of the patients had a detectable titre of Chlamydia trachomatis antibodies in their sera, with an average titre of 1/128 +/- 0.4, which was significantly higher than in the uninfected controls (p less than 0.001). The specificity of the MIF test was 96%, sensitivity 91%. The study confirms the current views that chronic urogenital infections are caused by Chlamydia trachomatis. Q: Button disappears in the middle of the view when rotated I have a button in my view that I want to animate by rotating it 90° by using RotateTransition. When the view is in Portrait mode the button is displayed as I want it to be. However, when I rotate the view to Landscape mode the button just disappears in the middle of the view. This is my code (only the relevant part of the code): RotateTransition rotation = new RotateTransition(); rotation.setFrom 3e33713323
