What's New In SendToThings?

*The setup guide is available in english. It was posted in the devblog but we cannot post the video. * Do not forget to install Microsoft Visual C++ Redistributable Package (x64) After installing the setup, navigate to the “Thing Setup” app on your iPad and then follow the steps to make your Things 3 account connected to your email. Here is an example of a Things 3 task sent to Things via the app. Things to note: If you are using another email, just make sure that you enabled the “lesssecureapps” option. You may also want to test your connection using the “Thing Test” app. If you encounter any issues, reach out to our support team. In order to find out more information about the app, visit the official site. “iOS9 was released by Apple a few weeks ago. You may have read about all the amazing things Apple included in the new update and how it will improve your overall mobile experience. One of the most important and much-discussed new features in iOS9 is Control Center, an entirely new hub for all the system’s major features. Control Center also boasts a bunch of new and useful features that aim to offer users some of the best tweaks we’ve seen so far.” “…a feature of iOS 8.3, called “Control Center”. It works in much the same way as the Control Center on Android (the concept of a “knockdown menu” has been used in iOS since iOS 7), and provides all of the same controls: time, brightness, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, Airplane mode, and more.” On top of that, you get Notification Centre. If you can’t read the details below, it’s simply a sleek-looking notification icon that shows a breakdown of your notifications, as well as being able to quickly glance at them without having to open the app itself. The homescreen has been redesigned, with weather, brightness and settings now easily accessible through a swipe. The Camera app now offers a guided photo mode to capture your best shots. Control Center is also home to shortcuts for quick access to your favourite apps, like Control Center. For the first time, Apple is using Continuity across their platforms for Mac and iOS. That means you can now switch seamlessly between your iPad and iPhone, as well as iMac and your Mac, and send photos and messages from one device to the other, much like with the Messages app. “With iOS 8.4, Apple has improved the login process by allowing users to sign into their apps and sites without having to remember complex passwords, PINs, and other details. Apple’s operating system now allows users
