After all, your body has to heal from a strenuous workout so you want to be careful how you treat it. But if you want to be rested when you get home, you might be better off booking a massage to come to your house. That's what two community-based businesses are hoping to do for an upcoming event: free massage classes for youth in Oahu. On Aug. 24, from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., the Massage Therapy Association of Hawaii will host a "Massage-A-Thon" for the YMCA's Honolulu "Hawaii Youth Fitness Expo." The expo, open to the public, will be held at the Waianae YMCA, 728

Ula'ula Rd. The "Massage-A-Thon" will offer massage to 150 participants, some of whom will also take part in the free yoga classes that will be held for the participants beforehand. Participants will receive a 30-minute massage, and one of the therapists will also give a 10-minute massage to the class. After the massage class, participants will have a chance to practice yoga, and then they can participate in the
