I would like to create a Tower Defense style of game, using a black and white backgrounds, and colorful characters, all of which will be controlled with cursor keys, as fast as possible. My idea is that you will control a cannon-equipped spaceship, and begin each level as a "cursored" shoot-them-up-video game. This should be a great way for you to practice your programming skills, as well as learn about things as quickly as possible. This game is currently up on Alt.Tab.iGame.com I will answer any questions you may have regarding this project, and other things I know how to do. Also, I would like to create a "Don't Click The Mouse" game. This will be a little side-project of mine, to my learning. I think that if you don't know the mouse at all, then it is a nice thing to have to tip off to. That way you will not click the mouse and make yourself nervous. Something that I learned the hard way... Anyways, enough rambling... This project would require a lot of work, and I would need to impress some people. It takes a lot of work to make people understand what you are doing in a nicer way, and to learn certain things. Also, there would be a lot of tests and pixels.. However, if you want me to make something good for me, and can take care of the project so that I don't have to work it too hard, then I would be happy to continue this project. Huge thanks to teddy for requesting this tutorial. It's a lot of fun, and is pretty quick to get started on as well. We've thought about putting in a primer section or learning page so that beginners can have a good walk through. TeddyAyla 02-10-2009 Hi there, welcome to the forums! LEGOhead 02-10-2009 this is fun, i like how the placement of the enemies is a bit different though ;) Lee Talbot 02-10-2009 Hello, there is a space behind the game right? I'm sorry I don't really understand what you've written but I don
